You Color Blind? Many Eye Defects Worse for Driver

NEW YORK—Drivers with "tunnel vision" or those slow to recover from the temporary blindness caused by a blaze of oncoming headlights are a much greater danger on the highway than color-blind motorists.

So reports Leonard M. van Noppen, who supervises a passenger car fleet that travels 30,000,000 miles annually for a big auto finance company. He warns that at this time of the year particularly—when twilight, with its extra deceptions, lasts longer—defective eyesight is one of the major dangers to motorists.

Van Noppen, vice president of Universal C. I. T Credit Corporation, reports that optometrists have found that color-blindness is not particularly hazardous, judging by accident statistics. Color-blind motorists, he says, are able to distinguish between signal lights by the difference in brightness between red and green (red appears brighter).

Eyesight defects that are especially dangerous, he reports, are inability to see distant objects clearly; tunnel vision, or the inability to see over a wide area or "catch glimpses" of things on either side while watching the road (warning signs are next to useless); inability to judge distances (especially vital when passing other cars on the road); and faulty night vision, which means the driver cannot see against moderate glare or when there is little light, and does not recover speedily enough from headlight blindness.

Many U. S. Women Widowed by Age 55

NEW YORK—Despite increased postponement of widowhood to the older ages as a result of the declining mortality prior to midlife, last year 115,000 wives were widowed in the United States through the death of a husband less than 55 years of age.

At the time of the last census there were, in all, 700,000 white widows in the United States who had lost their husband within the preceding decade, and who were under 50 years old at the time of their loss. Of these, almost one-third had been widowed two to four years, and one-half for five to nine years.

These facts emerge from a study of young widows and their dependents based upon 1950 census data. Two-fifths of the widows under 50 years of age had borne children and many of these children were quite young—about 80,000 were under age five. Nearly three out of every five of the widows still in their early twenties had responsibilities for preschool children.

Tornado Toll Heavy Over Ten-Year Span

NEW YORK—Tornadoes in the United States took 1,766 lives during the decade 1946 through 1955, and inflicted injuries on approximately ten times that many persons, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's statisticians.

During the ten year period the loss of life varied considerably from year to year. Over the past 40 years, however, there has been a general tendency for the fatality toll to decrease from one decade to the next — the 1907-46 toll being 3,114, the 1925-35 figure 2,138, and the 1936-45 figure 1,896.

May was the peak month for tornadoes during the past decade, accounting for nearly one-fourth of the deaths.

The heaviest death toll from tornadoes in the United States during the decade just ended resulted from the series of tornadoes which swept through the Missouri Valley States on the weekend of March 22, 1952, taking 208 lives.

Cousins Can Marry, Consultant Believes

CHICAGO—A medical consultant has contradicted the notion that all cousins who marry will have defective children.

In a query to the Journal of the American Medical Association, a physician asked if it would be wise for a girl to marry her second cousin—the grandson of her father's brother.

The unnamed consultant said that it would be all right—if the ancestry on both sides for three generations was sound physically, intellectually and emotionally.

TOWN OFFICER AT TRAINING SCHOOL

Town Council voted during its May meeting to send Officer John P. Stinnette to the League of Virginia Municipalities Training School for extensive training in all phases of police work.

The School is held in Richmond, at the State Police Headquarters.

Officer Stinnette will leave in June to take up this additional training. Mayor Richard D. Robinson reports that this training is a very arduous task, involving about fifteen hours per day.

Road Deaths Higher Than War Dead

Richmond, Va., May 30.— "Traffic crashes in the United States have cost us more lives than have all the wars of our history," said Colonel C. W. Woodson, Jr., Superintendent of State Police and Chairman of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee, in a plea for intelligent driving over the Memorial Day holidays.

Statistics recently compiled, he said, list 1,130,393 deaths of military personnel from the Revolutionary War through the Korean episode. Through 1956, the mishandling of motor vehicles had accounted for, 1,149,424 deaths and about 14,000 more have been added this year.

Falling last year on a Wednesday, the holiday was officially credited with only one Virginia death, but Colonel Woodson expressed the fear that many people will try to stretch the Thursday holiday this year into a long week-end of dangerous traffic conditions.

Noting that Memorial Day marks the beginning of the National "Slow Down and Live" campaign, Colonel Woodson warned against speeding and other "in a hurry" violations which are all the more serious in heavy traffic. He also stated that drinking and exhausted or sleepy drivers are dangerous factors during all holidays, "The pattern is always the same," he stated."People hurry to their destinations, indulge in long and strenuous recreation, and then try to hurry home late in the evening[illegible]

BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY EXPECTS ANOTHER RECORD-BREAKING YEAR

Richmond, May 29.- With the number of visitors this year already running well ahead of last year, the ever-popular Blue Ridge Parkway should have another record-breaking travel season.

The mountain highroad, built for ride awhile - top awhile touring, carried this year's millionth traveler early in May.

Early reports showed the number of travelers this year have increased 7.7 per cent over last year, according to Park Superintendent Sam P. Weems, of Roanoke. More than 4,000,000 persons rode the Parkway last year, an increase of 15½% over 1955, a Virginia State Chamber of Commerce study showed earlier this year.

The scenic parkway runs through the Southern Highlands, an area of outstanding mountain scenery and pleasant climate — from Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains to the Great Smoky Mountains in North Carolina and Tennessee.

It offers the traveler a journey through scenes that switch rapidly from rugged mountain peaks to quiet valleys where hardy and independent mountain folk still wring their livelihoods from the soil.

Modern conveniences, such as roads, electricity and radios have changed some of the "hill culture," but examples of the old - fashioned rugged way of life are still visible. The National Park Service has collected exhibits explaining the natural and human history of the region in conveniently located visitor centers.

Park Superintendent Weems said the exhibit of mountain machinery at Meabry Hill, an ancient and picturesque mill some 60 miles south of Roanoke, will be expandtd this year. The exhibit, which already includes a water-powered mill and a blacksmith shop, will be expanded during the summer to include a mint still, sorghum mill, and tannery. An old mountain cabin has been moved to the site to serve as a visitor center, Weems said.

At the Peaks of Ootter center, about 25 miles north of Roanoke, Weems added, a wildlife exhibit is expected to be in place by midsummer.

A weaving demonstration is being developed at Brinegar Cabin at Doughton Park, 25 miles south of the Virginia - North Carolina border. This exhibit is being worked out in cooperation with the Chatham Manufacturing Company, Weems said.

The Parkway has nicni careas for motoring groups and camping facilities at Peaks of Otter and Rocky Knob in Virginia, well - developed trail systems for hiking, and fishing in many of the streams along the Parkway.

The travel season on the Parkway started April 15 and will end October 31. In between those dates, the countryside along the roadway is a rapidly - changing botanical garden.

In late May the flame azalea brightens the forests and in June the purple rhododendron and the mountain laurel bloom. A variety of wildflowers are conspicuous during the summer months, when the cool nights and warm days are a major attraction.

Notice to Wheat Growers

Appomattox County wheat producers are reminded that June 1, 1957 is the final date for utilizing excess wheat of this year's crop. Mr. C. D. Lewis, County ASC Chairman, states that farmers failing to utilize wheat acreage in excess of the farm allotment or 15 acres, whichever is the larger, by that date for green manure, pasture, hay or silage, will be subject to a penalty. The penalty rate for the 1957 crop is $1.12 per bushel, which is 45% of the parity price for wheat as of May 1, 1957.

The ASC Chairman cautioned farmers who have excess wheat, whether intentionally seeded or otherwise, to make a note of the June 1 utilization date. No provisions under the 1957 wheat program exist which permit an extension of the date.

Farmers who plant wheat with other grain for mixtures are also reminded that such mixtures must be less than 50 per cent by weight of wheat when seeded, as well as when harvested, to qualify as a wheat mixture under the definition of the marketing quota program.

If any acreage does not qualify as a mixture on the basis of these requirements, it will count as wheat and will result in a marketing quota penalty if such acreage together with other wheat acreage on the farm exceeds the allotment or 15 acres, whichever is larger.

Lieut. Gen. Gavin, chief of the Army's research, has expressed Army's strong dissatisfaction with limitations on its use of airplanes and guided missiles.

Democratic leaders in Congress laid tentative plans for a tax reduction bill later in the session. Speaker Bayburn said the prospects for such action look good and that the cut would probably take effect next Jan. 1.
